The Big News
Swindlers Who Victimized Local Merchants Caught In Des Moines

VOLUME X, NUMBER 103. LA CROSSE, WISCONSIN, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1913. PRICE TWO CENTS

On The Great White Way

NEAR-NEWS AND CHATTER FOR SATURDAY NIGHT

To the lady first correctly guessing the identity of the person of whom the following is a character sketch, and bringing a copy of this paper to The Tribune office, a cash prize of $1.00 will be given. The subject of the sketch is a prominent citizen of La Crosse. After winning one prize, a contestant will not be eligible to again compete for a period of three months.

"Charles I had his Cromwell," but he didn't make much headway; Charles II led a gay life, dividing his time between hanging roundheads and contributing indiscriminately to England's birth rate in a reckless effort to balance his inroads upon the nation's population. There were other King Charleses, some seventeen in all, ranging from "The Bald" to "The Great," and while only Charles I decorated a chopping-block, they are all as dead as he.

That's the difference between these pompous potentates and our own King Charles, for ours is a live one. One fails to recall, so brief a thing is memory, whether their intimates called the late lamented monarchial Charleses "Charley," as they did the "Bonny Prince," but nowadays we know that "a cat may look at a king," and we say him "Charley" to his smiling face. Of his lineage have no doubt. Were not those kings of old scions of the noble house of Stuart? And is not his coat of arms inscribed upon a Stuart Tablet, no futile tablet of innocuous marble, but a tablet fit to grace the graves of a million dead dyspeptics?

Our Charles is blond and slim and trim and forty odd years young. He's a real merchant, wide of scope and with busy brain and hands. So omniverous is he, speaking merchantwise, that he has rendered obsolete that grand old sign, "Sold by All Druggists," and has substituted therefore the name that, in his formal subscriptions, comes after "Charley." While he still believes that drugs should be sold in drug stores, he does not let that interfere with the sale of everything else under the sun, and he'll send it up, or make it while you wait. In a way, he reminds us of a certain United States senator who made a fortune in the manufacture of a patent medicine. Asked, confidentially, if there was any merit in the preparation, the senator replied:

"Although I have never taken a single drop of my medicine, it has done me a great deal of good."

Early this week Ben Rochlus came back, and brought Baby Ruth with him. Or rather, a pretty lady who looks much like Baby Ruth brought them both.

You see, Ben had hardly hit Akron, when he left The Continental in this city to take up his abode there four years ago, before he met his fate, and Mrs. Rochlus in approximately no time effected the capture that a score of romantic-eyed damsels in this city had sighed for in vain. Sixteen months ago Baby Ruth joined them, with a few squalls and and many laughs, and a happy, inquisitive little face.

Ben Rochlus associated himself with the Hoover-Brooks Company, of Akron, in 1909. A year later he went to Rawlings, Agnew & Lang, of Cleveland, but after two years in their service returned to the Akron firm. He is in good health and prosperity is his friend.

Asked what changes in LaCrosse most impressed him, Mr. Rochlus replied:

"The new park system, the White Way and the traffic cop. Believe me, I rubbed my eyes to make sure I wasn't dreaming when I saw that traffic cop. They tell me his name is Main. He's typical—handsome and dashing, with languid eyes and an I'll-save-the-women expression. Cleveland hasn't one in its whole squad to beat him."

That Senator La Follette is the most popular American stateman with Ohio people is Mr. Rochlus's conviction. He attended the two La Follette meetings in Cleveland, and was one of a dozen who "passed the hat" in the meeting after Roosevelt broke into the game. The hat was filled with everything from small change to twenty-dollar bills. Ben says the demonstrations for LaFollette outdid those for Roosevelt, and that had La Follette's name been on the ticket he would have led the candidates.

"There'll be a lot of La Follette clubs formed for the next campaign if Bob becomes a candidate," concluded Mr. Rochlus.

I remember, I remember
The house where I was born
And the little window where I stood
To view September Morn.
The sun ne'er came a wink too soon
But I'm compelled to say
I've often wished that I might watch
September Morn all day.

Nobody but a fond mother could have called the broad shouldered deep lunged Scotchman "Harry," but then, he wasn't broad shouldered when he was christened, albeit he probably was deep lunged enough to inform the neighborhood when he wanted his dinner. Whether he remained "Harry" through his pinafore days is in doubt, but it's a hundred-to-one shot that he lost that mollycoddle appellation long before he won his long "pants."

"Harry," for sooth! He came to us, "Bob." And "Bob" suited us and him, in the bluff felowship which we enjoyed for a delightfully adventurous two years. Off hand he was "Bob" to everybody, although upon formal occasions he signed himself, with dignity aforethought:

"H. B. Robertson,
CITY EDITOR."

Seldom is it given men to work in such pleasant harmony as that which existed between Bob Robertson and his associates upon The Tribune, and few men are endowed with the power to inspire those about them with friendship so deep and genuine as that which in a golden chain links us with his fortunes down there below the equator. Many of our readers know him, and prize him as do we, and it seems fitting that the Great White Way, which knew him so well, and to which he has contributed many a good yarn, should make friendly note of his passing to the Tropics.

No weeps, please. Bob isn't dead—he's in Brazil.

Bob came to us from the Minneapolis Journal May 16, 1911. That day was the anniversary of The Tribune's birth, and there never was a better birthday present than he. Clean-cut, loyal, square, with nerve of steel, with fighting spirit tempered by a sense of humor, and an adventure-loving soul—what havoc he would have played with King James' cattle in the good old days of Roderic Dhu! He was one of us in a day, and he will be one of us while days are given us. A clever writer, resourceful, possessed of initiative, he made himself known to thousands of Tribune readers through the columns of this paper.

It was that spirit of adventure which dared life to hang a dull moment upon his calendar that took Bob from The Tribune. He had decided to go before he decided where to go. Then, one evening, Fate, in the athletic form of Roy Peterson, walked into the Elks' club and met him face to face. Mr. Peterson, engineer for the Rio de Janeiro Traction company, exclusive owners of light, power and city transportation franchises in that great city of a million people, told us the story of his career from the day when he refused a fat salary to sign with Hughey Jennings' Tigers, to accept a comparatively modest compensation in the engineering department of a power company building in Mexico. It was a splendid story of adventure, hard work and hard knocks—a story full of inspiration, and before the evening was over Roy had taken Bob's measure with the result that he asked the latter to return with him to Rio. Ten days later a crowd bade him farewell at the Northwestern depot.

It is more than 5,000 miles, by rail and boat, from La Crosse to Rio, but we are assured that we shall hear from Bob occasionally, and we look forward with pleasure to the time when he will talk to all his friends in a letter that shall add zest to the White Way. That he will make good there or anywhere, we know. Let's wish him health and an even break, for with these he can win his way. Altogether, now:

"Who's all right?"
"BOB ROBERTSON!"

QUICK JUSTICE IS PLAN FOR BLACK

Negro Who Attempted to Assault White Girl to Be Tried and Sentenced in Hour

SPRINGFIELD FEARS SECOND RIOT

Memory of 1908 Race War Causes Authorities to Use All Dispatch

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 13.—Charles Banks, a negro who attempted to assault Theresa Akins, a ten year old school girl, yesterday, will this afternoon be indicted, sentenced and on his way to the penitentiary. Officials of justice said that owing to his plea of guilty and the emergency existing, this triple action should take something less than an hour's time. This quick action will be taken because of fear that if the negro remains in a Springfield jail sentiment against him will crystallize with the result of a riot similar to the one in 1908.

The negro was thankful today that he was safe in jail when told of the search made for him yesterday by Edward Akins, the girl's father.

Armed with a high power rifle, Akins grimly continued the search until after Banks was captured and had confessed to another party.

Akins swore last night that he would shoot Banks on sight, and later asked to see him in jail. This request was refused. Friends of the Akins family made repeated threats.

It was believed today that a special grand jury would be called to indict Banks in order that there might be no delay in justice.

While Mrs. Edward Akins pleaded with her husband and deputy sheriffs to let her attack the negro, he was today sentenced to an indeterminate term in Pontiac reformatory of from 1 to 14 years.

"Let me get my hands on him. Let me get my hands on him," Mrs. Akins cried, as she struggled with those about her. She was led into a side room.

BIG TIM FOUND LYING IN MORGUE VICTIM OF TRAIN

Bowery Leader of New York Lost Since August 31 About to Be Buried in Potter's Field

WANDERED AWAY FROM GUARDS

Was Adjudged Incompetent by a Court Several Months Ago and Has Been Watched Since

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Congressman Timothy D. (Big Tim) Sullivan of the Bowery, is dead. Larry Mulligan, his half-brother, this afternoon identified as the body of Sullivan, that of a man killed on August 31 on Pelham Parkway.

The unidentified body lay for twelve days in the Tremont morgue, with none to claim it, and not until it was sent today to the morgue at Bellevue hospital, for interment in tthe potter's field, was it recognized as that of "Big Tim."

Identified by Policeman

Barney O'Connell, a policeman, identified it and a hurry call brought Larry Mulligan to the morgue. He confirmed the identification. The relatives had feared that Sullivan, who disappeared on August 31 from the home of his brother, Patrick H. Sullivan, in East Chester, Pelham Bay, had committed suicide.

"BIG TIM" SULLIVAN

The reports at the morgue, however, told of how Big Tim's body had been picked up by employes of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad after he had been struck by a train. Sullivan disappeared about 4 o'clock in the morning of August 31. His body was found at 4:30.

Great was the commotion on the Bowery and on the lower east side when the people there learned that "Big Tim" was really dead. He had long been the hero and the idol of that section, by reason of free shoes and coal in winter and clambakes and picnics in summer, and there was a rush for the morgue in East 26th street when it was reported that a body there was Sullivan's. The place was quickly besieged by men, women and children, many of them crying openly in their aprons and abashed men furtively wiping tears from their cheeks with knotted fists.

Leader Since 1892

Timothy D. (Big Tim) Sullivan was 51 years old and had been a New York political leader since 1892, when he wrested the leadership of the Third district, including the Bowery, and was sent to the assembly. He died a member of congress, though he had not attended a single session of the body.

Several months ago Sullivan was adjudged incompetent by a court and his affairs placed in the hands of a committee. He was constantly guarded.

HUNT BOY ROBBER

SAYS THEY TOOK MONEY ILLEGALLY

Mahoney Charges Mayor and Torrance with Being "In" Water Plant Contracts

NOTHING WRONG SAYS MAYOR

He and Torrance Both Claim Everything Connected with Matter Is Open to Inquiry

Charging that Mayor Ori J. Sorensen and Alderman William Torrance, former mayor, were collecting money for furnishing of supplies at the new water plant, Alderman P. W. Mahoney last night introduced in the common council an ordinance making it a violation of the law for any city official to be interested, directly or indirectly, in a contract wherein municipal funds footed the bill.

The offering of the ordinance was like the throwing of a bomb into the midst of the peaceful session of the city fathers.

Mayor Sorensen immediately called Mr. Torrance, president of the council, to the chair and proceeded, in a rather lengthy speech to the council, to characterize the proposed ordinance of Mr. Mahoney as a "piece of spitework."

The mayor had no more than uttered this charge than Mr. Mahoney was on his feet with the assertion that it was spite work but that it was but following the lead of Mayor Sorensen started when the latter failed to give Mr. Mahoney committee appointments sought by the latter.

Both Mr. Sorensen and Mr. Torrance admitted that they were doing work for the city. The former explained his stand in the affair in detail while Mr. Torrance maintained that he intended to take similar contracts whether or not they met with the approval of Mr. Mahoney.

The ordinance of Mr. Mahoney was simply a copy of the state law and as far as making the holders of the city contracts liable had no more effect than the present statute.

"Both Messrs. Torrance and Sorensen," said Alderman Mahoney today, "are guilty under the state law and are subject to removal from office for accepting pay for city jobs."

Mayor Sorensen today maintained that he was simply accommodating the La Crosse Construction Co.

"The La Crosse Construction Co.," he said, "had trouble with the Segelke-Kohlhaus people. They came to me and wanted me to bid on the wood work at the new pumping station.

"I wouldn't do it but agreed to get the Segelke-Kohlhaus company's figures and put them in as a bid. We got the contract which means that I got the checks for the work. Segelke-Kohlhaus delivered every bit of the material. I received the checks and simply endorsed them over to the Segelke and Kohlhaus people."

Alderman Torrance has often made the statement that if his office as alderman would prohibit him from doing jobs for the city he would resign from the council.

"The law is plain," said Alderman Mahoney today, "and both Mr. Torrance and Mr. Sorensen are accepting money to which they are not legally entitled."

Delay Woman "Cop"

After many arguments pro and con, the matter of employing a woman policeman was re-referred.

Hoboes on Streets

A resolution introduced by Alderman Frank G. Roth was passed recommending that the prisoners in the county jail be used by the city in the cutting of weeds, grading of streets and other work, and that an employe of the board of public works be used to guard the prisoners while working. A report read from the committee looking into the matter of a rock pile reported unfavorably on the matter, claiming that the maintaining of a rock pile would involve too much expense.

A resolution was made by Alderman Roth for the appointment of two extra police officers, one to be used to keep hoboes from Grand Crossing, and the other to be a competent book keeper, stenographer and general office man to be given the office of desk sergeant in the police station and to be used for office purposes by any official in the city hall, was re-referred to the police committee Alderman Mahoney declared that the placing of two additional men would be adverse to the state laws under the city charter.

CLEVER GIRL FORGER WHO WORKED IN CITY CAUGHT IN DES MOINES

PAY HONORS OF PRINCE TO GAYNOR

LIES IN STATE AT TOWN HALL

Body Reposes on Catafalque from Westminster Last Used for Lord Wolseley

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 13.—After a brief and simple funeral service and the most signal honors ever paid a foreigner in this port, the body of the late Mayor William J. Gaynor of New York, who died at sea, rested today in an especially constructed mortuary chapel on the Cunarder Lusitania.

The steamship will sail at 5 p. m. today and is expected to reach New York on Friday morning. At 6 o'clock the Rev. Theodore Howard, vicar of St. Matthew's chuhch, Liverpool, conducted funeral services after the ritual of the Anglican church, making it as short as possible. Rufus Gaynor, the dead man's son, was not present and the only spectators were American press correspondents from London.

Guard of Honor

The body of Mayor Gaynor was placed aboard the Lusitania at 8 a. m. today. At the pier head the cortege was met by representatives of the Cunard company and officers of the Lusitania. A guard of honor composed of quartermasters of the liner, took charge of the body and escorted it to the second deck forward, where the mortuary chapel was erected. The flags of the Lusitania were half-masted and the chapel draped with black. The floral tributes offered in Liverpool half filled the chapel.

Crowds Watch Cortege

On the arrival of the body of Mayor Gaynor in Liverpool last night aboard the Baltic, the lord mayor, acting on his own initiative, had an escort of mounted police at the pier head and a guard of honor for the casket. The flags of the town hall, the landing stage and many public buildings were at halfmast. In a drizzling rain, the casket, draped with an American and a British flag, was borne through a double line of bareheaded citizens and the streets all the way to the town hall were banked with huge crowds.

Arrived at the town hall, which was draped with mourning, the casket was borne up the grand stairway to the state chamber and there placed on a catafalque from Westminister where the bodies of many of England's most distinguished men have rested. The body of Lord Wolseley last reposed on it.

Wells and Assistant Adjutant General S. T. Town.

BILLS FOR BLIND

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 13.—Another kind of currency reform was demanded today at the annual meeting of Kansas City blind. A petition was sent to congress, asking that bills be made of different lengths so the blind cannot be defrauded. A merchant complained that some of his customers take advantage of his affliction by passing $1 bills on him for $10 bills.

GAME CALLED OFF

The game scheduled to take place tomorrow at League park between the North La Crosse team and the Summits will not be played. "Cold feet" was the laconic explanation of Manager Edward Horn of the Summits when asked why the contest was called off. Horn says the northsiders failed to post their end of the required $100 purse.

DAUGHTER OF WELL KNOWN SUPERIOR ICE MAN IS CLAIM

The Woman Who Passed Worthless Checks Here Eloped from Superior, Wis.

THE ARREST IS A PIECE OF LUCK

Des Moines Police Run Onto Clever Pair by Accident; Deposited Money in Local Bank

WEBBER IS AFTER THE COUPLE

Local Chief of Police Ready to Grab Them in Case the Iowa Case Against Them Fails, He Says

That the young woman who recently worked six La Crosse dry goods firms on worthless checks has been captured, with her husband, in Des Moines, Iowa, is the positive assertion of Police Chief John Webber today, following information received from the Iowa city.

The Des Moines police arrested the couple under the name of Mr. and Mrs. William Powers, Superior, Wis.

The latter, it is said, is the daughter of A. C. Boland, president of the Lake Nebagonen Ice company and one of Superior's wealthy citizens.

The man with whom she "worked" the check "game" and who is alleged to have assisted her in the local check deals, is a college graduate but refuses to give the police any clue as to his identity or family.

On August 26 the young woman presented checks to six of the city's best known dry goods firms and made good her escape. In La Crosse all of the checks were drawn on the National bank and were made payable to Lillie Horn, who is an employe of the La Crosse Hat works. It was the game of the pair to enter a city and choose the name of a local school teacher or a seamstress.

Deposited Money

The woman, to secure the check book on the National bank, deposited twenty-five dollars under the name "Gertrude Hosmer." This is recorded at the local bank and no check has been drawn against that name.

The pair who so skilfully caught local merchants have been working with great success over the entire northwest. According to information received here today the couple first worked Sioux City August 16, then Omaha, Indianapolis, Dayton, Cincinnati, La Crosse, Dubuque, Minneapolis and Des Moines in order named.

"CHEER UP CUTHBERT YOU'LL SOON BE DEAD"

Again the bi-partisan reactionaries of Wisconsin are "framing up a campaign" to destroy the representative government that has been restored to the people of this state by the La Follette progressive organization. It is to be the same old campaign of subterfuge—the same appeal to the sordid, the same attempt to win by sophistical and dishonest purse arguments, the same talk of mountebanks and demagogues.

And it will bring upon itself the same old defeat.

History cannot repeat itself so often and so emphatically as to teach the advocates of government by corporation that their regime is ended. Theirs is a resplendent optimism and "Hope springs eternal * *." It must have been as a stalwart that Cowper wrote:

"What ardently I wished, I long believed,
And, disappointed still, was still deceived.
By expectation every day beguiled,
Dupe of tomorrow even from a child."

"On with the dance! Let joy be unconfined!" There will be a season of hilarity, of billingsgate rampant, of triumph exultant, from this day until the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1914. And on Wednesday the crow will be served at the gloom breakfast tendered biennially by "Loathed Melancholy, of Cerebus and blackest Midnight born in stygian cave forlorn."

GOVERNMENT AND HOUSEKEEPING

"The average man and woman's first duty is to their home," said Col. Roosevelt in his latest speech at Chicago. "Politics come second."

He might have gone further and shown that the politics of today vitally concerns the home. The tariff, with its tax on the things we eat and drink and wear, is a home question; state government, with its power to insist on safe working conditions, reasonable hours and, to an extent untried as yet, on decent wages, is a home question; municipal government, with its control of the street, the parks, the playgrounds, the markets, is very much of a home question.

Government in this twentieth century has come to be called co-operative housekeeping. In a very large sense it is. The present generation has arrived at the mental attitude where it thinks of governmental machinery, not as something alien and apart, but as something intimate and close, something in which each one of us has a part.

As occasionally happens in the home, some are prone to think most of what they can get from the co-operative store and least what they can add to it. Altogther too many emphasize their rights and forget their responsibilities. There never was a right which did not carry a corresponding responsibility. Only when we balance the two will we have an approach to the ideal either in the individual home or in the larger home of city, state or nation.

Col. Roosevelt's remarks were apropos of woman suffrage. He said there was no more reason why woman's duty as a voter should interfere with her domestic duties than that man's duty as a voter should interfere with his business. As he pointed out, we have members of both sexes for whom any excuse for the neglect of the smaller duties is sufficient.

Sane, consistent and steady interest in politics, however, is not, in the larger sense, neglect of the home. The right kind of political interest by both men and women helps and lifts up the home.

GREAT MUNICIPAL ACHIEVEMENT SCORED

If you dwell in the suburbs of La Crosse, and should you in the dark of night, in your own snow-white bed, be bitten by some tenacious, crawling thing, don't shudder, and scream for the vermifuge—tain't that!

It's only a Solanum Rostratum.

Not recognizing this name, although it should be a household one, you seek your biology.

Wrong again!—Get your botany.

It's a sand burr.

The sand burr's habitat includes all outlying wards, boulevards, linen closets and lingerie, and its habits are fully described in the Psychology of Inanimate Cussedness. The writer, a male commuter, is in a position to say that it thrives on shoe laces and delights to automatically graft itself upon B. V. D.'s. As to what capers it cuts up with milady's hosiery we cannot say from personal research, and our little fund of hearsay evidence is of the key-hole variety, but an active imagination is sufficient unto the day.

Crop failures, those baneful children of democratic administration, are annual occurrences, somewhere. Last year it was in the Dakotas; this year it is in Kansas. Blight, or rust, or drought, or locust, or hookworm—they and their fellows find times and places to play havoc with every grain and tuber that grows—stay! all but one.

Crop failure never fazes the sand burr. It thrives in flood and drought, it defies the flying bugs and crawling worms and lives to prong you triumphant as you kneel to Ceres beside your empty dinner bucket. It is the crop perennial and eternal. It is Nature's triumph over her own distempers.

But let us not give all the glory to Nature. Let us not withhold from our city weed commission the credit so justly due. To this department we owe much for the bumper crop of 1913. Its work has been pursued with intelligence and industry.

Early in July its trusty helpers swept the boulevards and the highways and the byways with brush hooks, gently stirring the roots, with results that must be acknowledged to have contributed new lore to the science of cultivation, nor should we complain if here and there a careless scythe-man clipped the top from some noxious weed.

Thriving upon this treatment the Solanum frourished, and this week the department put on the finishing touches. The burrs were dead ripe, prime seed for 1914, and in dealing with the splendid garter-high stand that wreathed the sidewalks the workman achieved a new agricultural triumph. For mowing with flail-like violence, they succeeded in harvesting, threshing and sowing the entire crop with no tools but their famous Armstrong harvesters.

No doubt the department will soon issue an optimistic 1914 crop report, promising a yield that will out-bumper all past achievements, and to get the full benefit of which we advise suburban ladies to cultivate the slit skirt.

An optimist is a man who can go home at night and make lemonade out of the rinds of the lemons that have been handed him during the day.

A federal artillery horse after 26 years of continuous service is retired to the pension list. Bet there are a lot of former postmasters who wish they were a horse.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

It Pays

Why did those old Egyptian kings
Build pyramids and other things?
Why did they proudly carve or paint
An obelisk with figures quaint?
Why did some Roman monarch raise
A circus in those good old days?
Or keep a poet under hire
To sound a complimentary lyre?
Why did old Caesar late at night
Sit up describing every fight?
Or Alexander make that bluff
And say "the world's not big enough?"
To us who view the modern game
And see how wealth is wrung from fame,
The answer need not cause surprise,
It always pays to advertise.

The Salt of the Sea

Not long since a Scotch school board inspector asked the members of a class that was under examination:

"What is the cause of the saltness of the ocean?"

Flushed with the discovery which had flashed upon her mind, one little girl raised her hand.

"You may tell," said the inspector.

"Salt fish, sir," exclaimed the pupil triumphantly.

Too Far from France

"My dear," says the kind hearted husband, "I do not wish to say anything about our extravagant way of keeping house, but do you know it is a fact that the average French family lives on what the average American family wastes?"

"But, my angel," comments the helpful wife, "that would be impossible. In the first place, the cost of sending it to France would be too great, and besides, it would spoil before it got there."—Judge.

Easily Identified

Congressman Seaborn Roddenbury of Georgia gently smiled when the talk topic dwelt on the lord and master of the domestic ranch. He said he was reminded of little Johnny's visit to the zoo.

While rambling around among the animals with his father one afternoon, so ran the story of the congressman, little Johnny came to a minature lake on which two swans were swimming.

"Papa," said Johnny, pointing a chubby little finger out over the lake, "is that the father swan or the mother swan?"

"Which one do you mean, Johnny?" asked the old man, glancing in the direction indicated by the boy.

"I mean the one over there," answered Johnny. "The one with all the feathers pecked off his head, and isn't allowed to have the biscuit, or nothing."

"Yes, my son," promptly rejoined papa, with just a suspicion of a sigh. "That's the father swan, all right."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Got the Earth

Some months ago excavations were being made for new tracks on the line of a certain famous railway. At one point a nearby resident obtained permission to remove a quantity of turf to resod his premises, the section boss being instructed to notify the excavating "gang" when the resident should have secured all he desired.

"The man that wanted the earth has got it."

FACE DISFIGURED WITH ERUPTION

Spread Over Entire Face. Itched and Burned Terribly. Heavy White Crust. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Made Complete Cure.

810 East Elm St., Streator, Ill.—"A running sore broke out above my right eye, which spread over my entire face. It started as a small pimple. I scratched it open and the contents of this small pimple ran down my face. Wherever this ran a new sore appeared. They itched and burned terribly; I couldn't touch my face it burned so. It disfigured my face terribly and I couldn't be seen for everyone was afraid of it. It looked like a disease of some kind; it was all red and a heavy white crust on it. Everybody kept out of my way, afraid it would spread. I lost rest at night and I couldn't bear to have anything touch my face, not even the pillow. I had to lie on the back of the head. I was always glad when morning came so I could get up. It was extremely painful.

"I used ——— salve with small results. At last I thought of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I commenced using them. I used the sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment, one twenty-five-cent cake of Cuticura Soap and a half box of the fifty-cent size of Cuticura Ointment. It took three weeks to complete the cure." (Signed) Miss Caroline Miller, Apr. 30, 1913.

A Hero in a Wallow

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., tells a story of his father:

"Father tells many stories. Sometimes he tells a new one. Not long ago he related one to me that concerned a man who had imbibed rather too freely. The man in this condition fell into a watering trough. To the officer who came to help him out as he wallowed in the water he said:

" 'Offzer, ken save self. You save women an' shildren.' "

A Perplexing Bulletin.

In 1876 the late John Hay, who died as secretary of state, and Alvey A. Adee were serving together in the legation at Madrid. They were intensely interested in the outcome of the Republican national convention and spent days wondering who would be nominated. One morning they found this item in a Madrid newspaper: "Rutebart 13. Noyes of America has been elected president of the republic of the north."

That was as near as the Spanish editor could get to the bulletin "Rutherford B. Hayes has been nominated for president by the Republican national convention," and it took Adee and Hay a week to figure it out.

Chinese Music.

The Chinese have eight instruments for making their ritual music—the bell, the flute, the drum, the sonorous stone, the fife, the plume, the shield and the ax. The last three make no music, but are used as decoration or emblem in the musical ceremonies and are enumerated as musical instruments. In every ceremony there are always two instruments of each kind, sometimes as many as four or six, never an odd number, in order to emphasize the duality of the Chinese people. For instance, one drum announces the beginning of the music, and its mate strikes the last note; one bell calls and its counterpart answers.

CHAPTER VI.
A Game of Cards.

Hidden in the mechanism of character are springs unsuspected by one's nearest, unknown to one's self, which the habits of every day keep polished and oiled, ready for action. Many times the psychological moment for their use does not arrive, and a life ends with no outside history but commonplace; sometimes in the midst of commonplace the touch falls on the electric button, the coiled wire is sprung, and an ordinary career rises unexpectedly to heroism, or falls as unexpectedly by temptation. It is the habit of years which has prepared the one crisis or the other.

Francois Beaupre—Le Francois of Vicques—sober, laborious, had in him a certain pig-headedness, and also a vein of the gambler which had swollen with use; yet because it had so far brought him only good luck the neighbors called this good judgment. He was a dealer in working oxen; he bought and raised and sold them, and only his wife knew what chances he often took in buying young beeves. It was a simple solid form of speculation, yet it was that. It had given him the custom of taking chances and of confidence in his "luck"—all of which is perhaps no bad thing, yet it prepared a bad thing for Francois Beaupre. Up to this time he had been fortunate to a miracle and his bargains were so lucky that he stood highest among his neighbors for keenness and for caution. His house was the largest, his table the most generous, his wife the best-dressed of the village; he planned to give his children, particularly young Francois, who was more than a common student, opportunities. Francois should go to the college at Delesmontes. No other man in the place was so comfortable, and because of his genial and simple soul he was not envied. Le Francois was a popular person, and it was a pride to the village that his name and his prosperity were known about the countryside.

On a day in September he left Vicques early in the morning to drive to the market in Delesmontes, a league distant, two pairs of oxen which he had bought as calves for almost nothing from poor stock out of a farm leagues away. He had fed and trained and cared for them till now they were well set-up and powerful and smooth-working—ready to sell for a good price. Francois kissed his wife and the baby, and called good-by to the children playing in the garden, and left the little place so full of hopeful life, with contentment in his heart. He planned, as he swung along the road whistling, what he would do with the money which he would bring back—eight hundred francs, he believed it would be. Not a clearer head or lighter heart passed that day along the Roman road to Delesmontes. At the market he found that there were few oxen to be disposed of, none which compared to his, and his ideas of value went up—he would get nine hundred francs for them, which delayed the sale. Eight hundred he might have had easily, but the other was a large price, even for the best. However, Francois was cheerful and obstinate and confident, and such qualities accomplish things—he got his price.

But it came to be, by the time his bargain was closed, three o'clock in the afternoon, and he had had no dinner. With the cattle off his hands, and the money in his pocket he felt a sense of leisure and of wealth. Hungry as a wolf he felt also, and he turned into the inn of Delesmontes, where the sign of a huge bear, cut out of tin and painted black, swung before the door.

It was pleasant inside in the great clean hall of the inn, twenty feet wide by forty long. Bars of yellow afternoon sunlight patterned the white scrubbed floor; at the tables of black oak a number of men sat on benches, bottles and glasses before them, and pulled at their pipes, and the clouds of smoke rose to the dark wood ceiling, bluish already with much smoking; against the whitewashed walls hung engravings of battles framed in red cherrywood. Doors and windows were open, and through them one saw harvest fields lying gold in the sunlight. As Francois sat down he faced a window through which, down the slow slope from Delesmontes perching on the mountain, beyond a stretch of tranquil country, lifted, three miles away, a bunch of roofs, red-tiled and brown-shingled, and the red spire of a church with a newly-gilded ball—his village of Vicques. He sighed hungrily and happily. In half an hour, after a glass of wine and a little bread and meat, he would be on his way there with that comfortable purse of nine hundred francs in his pocket, eager to tell his good comrade and dear wife of the day's success.

He was alone at his table, but three or four men whom he knew slightly nodded with friendliness across the room; he was a man who inspired friendliness. In the big hall, in all Delesmontes, in all the country was no one happier or more satisfied with life than Francois Beaupre when he entered the Inn of the Bear at three o'clock on that sunshiny afternoon of September the eighth. Before six he rose up to leave it a man ruined and broken-hearted.

A waitress approached him — a sommelliere—trim in her short calico skirt and white apron, her hair done in the picturesque fashion of the place—braided and turned around the head in the back, in the front parted and laid in two great puffs with a wide blue ribbon between to hold it. The girl took his order; as she turned to go a man just coming in knocked against her, and apologizing with many words, caught sight of Francois.

"Good day!" he saluted him heartily. "Good day, Monsieur Beaupre," and Francois, friendly always, answered "Good day," but with a reserve, for he did not recall the man. "You don't remember me? That is natural, for we met but once. Yet I have not forgotten you. It was at the house of my cousin, Paul Noirjean of Devillier—he who also deals in oxen, though not so fortunately as you, perhaps. We met there. I saw you only a few minutes, but I have not forgotten you, and my cousin also speaks very often of Francois Beaupre. He has a great opinion of your judgment."

Now Paul Noirjean was an old acquaintance and a solid man, and though Beaupre did not see him often, living six leagues away, he respected him highly. A cousin of his was to be considered, and Francois was embarrassed that his memory could not focus on the meeting. He tried to cover this with cordiality, and invited the stranger to share his meal.

Love in a Hurry

On the day before his twenty-eighth birthday, Hall learned that his uncle had left him four millions provided he married before he was twenty-eight.

Hall had not contemplated marriage, but he got busy! He proposed to (1) a languishing widow, (2) a breezy debutante, (3) a fascinating model, all in the space of half an hour. They all "took it under advisement," and about the time they all decided to accept Hall realized that he was really in love with Flodie, his typist. Then he had to hustle to get out of his entangling alliances.

Love in a Hurry is the quintessence of all that is really funny, a comedy courtship that touches the spot.

Newspaper Comment Upon La Follette's Tariff Vote

Racine Journal (standpat republican): One of the surprises of the senate vote was the stand of Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin. La Follette voted for the measure. He had fought for changes in the bill all through the special session, yet in view of his previous utterances on tariff revision, for him to have voted against the bill would have been highly inconsistent.

Superior Telegram (progressive republican): Senator La Follette voted for the bill. In this he did wisely. From the Wisconsin viewpoint the bill has defects, but it is the best that can be had at this time, and is better than the old law in the most of its features, although in some of its features it is not better. In general it represents the progressive view better than the old law does. For that reason Senator La Follette was justified in voting for it, although only one of the other sensators classed as progressive did likewise.

Milwaukee Sentinel (standpat republican): Done in his usual dramatic way, with the usual bit of cheap stage "business" for the galleries, it was the act of a political mountbank, without a scintilla of principle or consistency to justify it.

Milwaukee Journal (Independent progressive): Senator La Follette's act called for courage and high statesmanship, but in not faltering he has done himself no harm. Once again he has looked more clearly into the future than his colleagues. He has come nearer than they to realizing that here was not a question of party lines, but of popular government. No man could doubt the wish of the majority of voters that the new tariff bill be passed. In voting for the Underwood bill which is indeed moderate protection Senator La Follette has opened a door to his party to get away from the robber schedules that are not protection, but graft. In voting for it he has voted against the invisible government and the almost strangle hold of private interest on public service. The event will justify his courage; he will not be disappointed in the approval of his state.

Milwaukee Leader (socialist): In voting for the democratic tariff bill, Senator La Follette did not emulate the dog which, in crossing a bridge, dropped the bone that it had in its mouth in a futile endeavor to seize the bone which it saw reflected in the stream below.

Beloit Daily News (progressive republican): But there need be little surprise at Mr. La Follette's vote, nor was there any need of worrying that he was "in a hole." The senator voted just as might have been expected—according to his convictions. That he was not particularly concerned with being "regular" is indicated by the fact that he was the only republican to vote with the democrats. The senator would much rather be right than "regular," a fact proved by his record through all the years he has been in public life.

Milwaukee Free Press (Stephenson standpatter): How, in these circumstances, Senator La Follette can still lay claim, as he does, to party allegiance, is difficult to comprehend.

St. Paul Dispatch (independent): Always is there ground upon which to base both attack and defense of a tariff proposal, consequently the senators from the northwest, for opposing, and La Follette and Poindexter, for agreeing to the bill, will find supporters as well as challengers. There is no room to question the insistent demand of the people of the country for lower tariff schedules and the general bill is the answer to that demand. The country expected it and is prepared for its terms. The alarmist can get but small audiences to listen to his fears and the long time beneficiaries of the old protective system have prepared to enter the fight for business on even terms.

Duluth Herald (independent): Senators La Follette and Poindexter, who unexpectedly voted for the bill, are consistent in their action. Other so-called "insurgent" and "progressive" senators like Clapp of Minnesota, who made their records by fighting a dishonest tariff and then voted to retain that very tariff when they had a chance to help reform it, are far from consistent.

Oshkosh Northwestern ((bull moose): Of course the one big surprise in the senate vote was the action of Senator La Foliette, classed as a progressive republican, in voting with the democrats. Up to the last minute it was uncertain which way the Wisconsin senator would vote on this question, and while his decision will doubtless cause criticism and denunciation on the part of many old line republicans, the people as a whole will question neither the sincerity of his convictions, or his courage and independence in following these convictions to their logical result. . . . For such independence the people of this nation should have respect, if not admiration.

Peoria Herald-Transcript (republican): The Underwood tariff bill was adopted by the United States senate late yesterday afternoon by a vote of 44 to 37. The only feature of the roll call was the fact that Senator La Follete of Wisconsin, republican, and Senator Poindexter of Washington, progressive, voted with the democrats. It is reported that this alliance caused some surprise in the senate, but the shocks probably will not be so severe in the country.

Wausau Record-Herald (standpat republican): It removes him finally and definitely from the list of eligibles for the presidential nomination in 1916.

Chicago Record-Herald (conservative): It is believed that the penetrating La Follette mind has pictured Roosevelt in the ring for the republican nomination next time with the realization of the difficulty of obstructing him in the effort to capture the delegates to the national convention. Roosevelt as a republican candidate would leave an opening in the leadership of a third party. Fate could be no more ironical than would be the case should Roosevelt run for president under the republican banner and La Follette lead a fight against him in the name of the progressives.

It was Tommy's first day in the country, and everything surprised him. THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

THE MODEL FLAT

By MARY MARSHALL

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The door of Scott street settlement house stood ajar and Dick Wadley went in, passed a group of coarse-figured, sallow-faced east side mothers waiting to receive their offspring from the day nursery, and groped his way through a dark hall of the old building in search of some one in charge. He found Miss Bailey, the head worker, and told her that he wanted to "look around," and with stereoptyped cordiality she told him he could go through the building, and if he wanted to ask any questions he could find her later.

Dick knew that if Miss Bailey knew what errand had called him there her reception of him would have been different, her cordiality would have been of a different brand. He wandered up several flights of well known stairs into different club rooms. The building had once been a church, but since the encroachment of a non-church going population in the neighborhood it had been abandoned to the uses of a settlement house. After the last flight of stairs he found himself in a region that had once been the vaulting of the church before the floors were inserted. At one side of this attic room Dick saw what seemed to be a playhouse. At least there were four small windows looking out on the main floor, and through these windows he could see curtains and potted geraniums. There was a front door apparently leading into the small apartment.

Wadley was interested. He stood looking at the little apartment and heard girlish chattering. Then a little pig-tailed, east side girl, with an apron and an empty market basket, came through the door and went about, apparently pretending to be shopping. She stopped at a wood box at the end of the large attic and filled her basket with kindling wood. Then she went back to the playhouse. Wadley thought of knocking at the door and finding out what was going on inside, but he waited. Finally the door opened and a dozen little girls, all very happy and with a great deal to say, came out. A young woman came to the door and helped them into their hats and coats in one end of the attic room, and then saw them to the head of the stairs, and with a word of encouragement to each one, with a "Be sure and come next week, Becky," to one, and a "I hope the baby will be better soon, Rachel," for another, sent them down stairs.

Then the young woman, whom Wadley saw at a glance, even in the gloaming of the late afternoon, was young and graceful, came back to the door. He came up to her as she went into the door of the little apartment.

She greeted him with a little start. "I did not see you," she said. "Have you been here long?"

Wadley told her that he was just looking about, that he had been watching her class from the outside. The young woman was eager to explain things to him. She said that the apartment, as he called it, was a model flat. It consisted of three rooms of the sort that the young girls of the neighborhood would probably have to go to housekeeping in, and it was fitted up with inexpensive furnishings.

"The girls all do marry here," she said, 'so the best work we can do is to show them how to make good wives."

"So you teach these east side people how to marry and live on their little, and the poor young bankers and lawyers on the other side of town with ten times their salaries can't marry because the young women they would marry can't manage?"

The young woman laughed. "That is about the situation," she said, "and yet these people are happy." By this time they had gone into the apartment and Wadley was delighted with its comfortably furnished rooms.

"I saw the curtains and the flowers from the outside," he said: "They look very pretty."

"They aren't real windows," she explained. "They are just solid glass, but they are where the windows ought to be. The real light and air comes in through the skylight." And with each of Wadley's inquiries she explained details of the little flat. She told him that she was Miss Clarice Hardwick, that she was a volunteer worker, and that she wished she had enough money to make a generous gift to the settlement house.

Wadley felt that it was time for him to explain himself. "I am looking around here for a way to spend some money—not my own, of course, but some of my chief's." He explained that he was a young member of the firm of a prominent financier and that he was often sent on the thankless job of looking up institutions to which the financier thought of giving money. He had been thoroughly discouraged when he arrived at the house, he said, but now he was glad he had come.

Clarice was interested and, laughing, said she wouldn't let him go till he had promised to get a little of the money for her to spend on model flats.

All this explanation had taken half an hour, and when they started to the door they found it was locked. Clarice remembered that the janitor always came up and locked it from the outside after she had gone, and kept the key. Apparently he had thought she had gone at her usual time.

Wadley suggested the inside windows, but Clarice reminded him that they didn't open. "We could break one through," she suggested, but Wadley protested and Clarice assured him that some one would come to their rescue before long, as there was a boys' club on that floor at 7 and they would hear their call for help. In the meantime Clarice laughed and Wadley laughed, and neither seemed to be sorry.

"You can prove to me whether you really do deserve the endowment," he said. And Clarice started the fire in the little stove and began to heat the water for the supper that she was going to get.

This supper—coffee with condensed milk, breakfast food and creamed chipped beef and jam—these were all the supplies that Clarice had on hand in the model kitchen—served on the bare white table in the model flat, was the most royal feast that Wadley had ever had.

Once out of the Scott street settlement house, jostled by the Scott street population, Wadley asked if he might see Miss Hardwick home, and she accepted his escort with relief.

"I hope," said Clarice, as she left him at the door of her house in the other side of the city, "that you will have some influence with your chief, and that you will use that influence in favor of model flats."

Wadley stood and took her outstretched hand. "Yes," he said, "but won't you give me another demonstration? You will let me come again, won't you?"

Two months later Wadley met Clarice one afternoon in the Scott street house after her class was over. The voices of the little housekeepers were still to be heard on the stairs.

"Clarice," he said, taking her hand that was dripping with soap and water from the little kitchen sink, "I brought the chief today. He is down talking with Miss Bailey. He is going to spring his check on her. It is for $50,000, with more to follow to use to enlarge the work. And I have persuaded him to stipulate that $10,000 at least is to be spent on model flats. I didn't want to tell you till I was sure. I was afraid he would change his mind." Wadley had taken both her hands and Clarice, in her joy at the announcement, pressed his hands in hers. "And now, Clarice, you won't say no, this time, will you?" Wadley went on. "Let's make today famous for a double gift."

Cleaning Chairs.

Leather chairs often become greasy looking where the arms and head rest on the leather. To remove these marks try linseed oil. Boil half a pint of oil, and let it stand until nearly cold; then pour in half a pint of vinegar. Stir till it is well mixed and bottle. When it is ready for use, put a few drops on a flannel and polish off with soft dusters. This will thoroughly renovate all leather.

Joy in Doing Good Work.

The recipe for self-confidence is? Do good work. "Courage," says Emerson, "comes from having done the thing before." A man who does good work does not have to talk, apologize or explain—his work speaks. And even though there be no one to appreciate it, the man feels in it a great, quiet joy. He relaxes, smiles, rests, fully intent on taking up his labors tomorrow and doing better than ever.

CHAUNCEY OLCOTT

The remarkable popularity of Chauncey Olcott becomes more evident year after year. At every one of his local engagements it would seem as though the high water mark were reached, but each year the gross takings exceed those of the previous seasons. His engagement at the La Crosse Theater Tuesday evening, September 16, will be especially noteworthy as he comes with what is said to be his best play in years—"Shameen Dhu," by Rida Johnson Young, which is described as being especially interesting, teeming with the fascination of Irish romance, adventure, wholesome sentiment and infectious humor, while through it all floats the delightful melody of Olcott's sweet tenor voice. The play is staged by Henry Miller, who is said to have left nothing to be desired in the way of scenic embellishment and who has provided a company of especially competent players to support the star. The play takes as its background an absorbingly interesting period to American audiences—that of the Revolutionary war, and the origin of the immortal Yankee battle hymn—"Yankee Doodle Dandy," is used as the theme about which the play has been constructed.

Berlin's Palaces.

Berlin owes its palaces and many of its finest buildings to Frederick William I. That monarch had a passion for building, and transmitted it to others. Whenever he heard of a rich merchant settling in the capital h rdered him to build a residence in ke ing with his wealth. If the merch t obeyed he was duly rewarded and many German families owe their title of nobility to an ancestor having built a fine house.

Skin on Boiled Milk.

What causes the formation of the skin on the surface of boiled milk and of hot cocoa that is made with boiled milk? Doctor Porcher of Lyons, France, says that it is the result of the disintegrating of the lime and the casein, and the lime combines with carbonic acid from the air to form a thin film of carbonate of lime. This film supports the undissolved casein in the milk, as well as some coagulated albumen and fat.—Technical World.

STATE FAIR FACES A LOSS OF $10,000

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 13.—Facing a loss of upwards of $10,000 and with an attendance of about 25,000 including the Milwaukee school children who were admitted free, the agricultural end of the Wisconsin state fair came to an end last night. Today the automobile races, an addad feature of the state fair, will close the week's exhibit.

The races yesterday were exceptionally good, closing what has proven to be the best state fair from an exhibit and speed point of view ever put on in Wisconsin.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

Cat Only Living Thing on Derelict.

From a derelict ship a cat was rescued near Plymouth, England, a few days ago. H. M. S. Donegal had received orders to search for and sink the derelict Norwegian barque Blenmark. The Glenmark had been dismantled and abandoned more than a month ago. Her crew was rescued and taken to Liverpool by the steamer Dunholme. The Donegal picked up the ship 500 miles out, but finding the hull sound determined to save her. The only living thing on board the derelict was a cat, which had been driven mad by thirst and which severely bit a bluejacket who stroked it.

Bachelors and Matrons.

A dilettante told me yesterday: "I prefer black and white sketches by a clever artist to his finished paintings. They leave more to my imagination—which is a better traveler than any painter's brush." For the same reason, the bachelor interests matrons more than married men do. He, too, is unfinished; and every woman likes to imagine what she might have made of him—or what she may.—Rene Laidlaw in Smart Set.

Historic Crimes and Mysteries

By WALT MASON

The Fate of the Forgers

ON Tuesday morning, March 7, 1775, Mr. Robert Perreau walked into the banking house of Drummond Brothers, at Charing Cross. He was greeted cordially by the bankers, for Mr. Perreau, although merely an apothecary, was a Napoleon among apothecaries, and was a welcome guest at the houses of the great. Within a week the bankers had seen him at Lord Egmont's and Lady Lyttleton's. On this occasion Mr. Perreau was full of business.

Producing as security a bond for $37,000, signed by William Adair, whose signature would be honored at any banking house, he asked for the loan of $25,000.

The banking brothers scrutinized the document closely, and Henry Drummond said: "It doesn't look like the signature of Mr. Adair."

"It isn't the signature of William Adair," agreed Robert Drummond. "I have seen his signature a hundred times and know it as well as my own."

Robert Perreau seemed amused.

"There is no doubt about it," said he. "It is witnessed by Arthur Jones, his solicitor, and by Thomas Stark, his servant."

"It is an easy matter to settle," said Henry Drummond. "Let us go and see Mr. Adair. He is in town now."

"Standing over her with an open knife until it was done."

If Perreau's heart sank into his boots at this proposition he made no sign. He seemed quite willing, and announced that his coach was at the door. So he and the Drummond brothers climbed aboard and drove to the residence of Adair, the rich army agent. Arrived there, the Drummonds explained the business to Adair, who denounced the bond as a forgery the minute he set eyes upon it

The Drummonds turned to Perreau and sternly asked him how he came into possession of the bond. By this time the apothecary was uneasy, and a cold sweat was on his forehead. "Send for my sister-in-law," he stammered, "and she will explain."

The sister-in-law, known to society as Mrs. Daniel Perreau, was sent for, and soon arrived, a dazzlingly beautiful creature. Although known throughout the town as the wife of Daniel, there never had been a marriage, and her true name was Caroline Rudd. The writers of the period describe her as the prettiest, wittiest and most captivating woman in London. She must have been charming, so many good judges of beauty praised her, but the numerous pictures of her still in existence are disappointing to those who have read the ecstatic descriptions. One of the most celebrated of these pictures represents her as a prisoner in the dock. Her hair is built up a foot high over her head, and she wears a ridiculous cap, and she would never win anything but the booby prize in a modern beauty contest.

Ushered into the Adair residence, the situation was explained to her, and she realized its gravity at once.

"I forged the bond," she said. The bankers didn't think that probable, or even possible, whereupon she asked for a pen and sheet of paper, and dashed off a duplicate of the signature on the bond. By this time Daniel Perreau had arrived, and also a constable, who had been sent for by the bankers. But the constable was sent away. Mrs. Rudd made such an impression upon the Drummonds that they consented to forget the whole occurrence, and the Perreaus, with the woman who had saved them, drove away.

Had the Perreaus let things rest there, they might have got out of their difficulties. But there were other forgeries afloat, and discovery of the truth might come at any time, so, in order to protect themselves, and arrange for a goat, they went to Bowstreet and laid information against "the female forger." This cowardly attempt to protect themselves at the expense of the woman who had risked everything to save them, deprived them of public sympathy in the time to come, when they needed it most. The judges took the measure of Robert Perreau, and sent him as well as the woman to prison. The next day Daniel Perreau followed them. This Daniel was a great fop, who cut a wide swath among the macaronis. He and Robert were twins, and greatly resembled each other in appearance, but Robert was a keen business man, a money maker, while Daniel was a wastrel. Both brothers were speculating in Exchange alley, and it was this that led them to forgery.

The story of what followed in the courts is too complicated to be detailed in a brief narrative. Mrs. Rudd, who had been the ally of the brothers, was infuriated by their treachery, and became their bitterest enemy. She testified that she did sign the bond, as she had confessed, but did it in fear of her life, Daniel standing over her with an open knife until it was done. She had committed other forgeries under similar conditions. These other forgeries began to turn up, and they totaled an enormous sum.

The public interest in the Perreau case was so great for a year that even the rebellion of the American colonies attracted comparatively little attention. The newspapers were full of the case, and every man who could charter a printing press was busy issuing broadsides. A certain Admiral Frankland, known as "Old Shiver-Me-Timbers," used up gallons of ink assailing Mrs. Rudd, and thereby created sympathy for her, which was the very thing he didn't want to do. And Mrs. Rudd had her champions among the great writers of the time.

In the course of time the Perreau brothers were brought to trial, and their guilt was so evident to the jury, when all the testimony was in, that they were convicted without the waste of a moment, and sentenced to death. Many people believed then, and many argue even at this late day, that the brothers were the dupes of the designing Mrs. Rudd, but this theory didn't appeal to the court.

Being convicted and sentenced, the Perreaus were sent back to jail to await the outcome of the trial of Mrs. Rudd. The fact that she was brought to trial at all was the occasion of much excited criticism at the time, for she had confessed under promise of immunity from punishment. But she appeared in the dock, "brilliant as ever," as Walpole said, and she conducted her own defense to such good purpose that she was acquitted. After her release James Boswell called upon her and had a pleasant talk, and Samuel Johnson said that he would have visited her, too, only that "nowadays everything gets into the newspapers."

Wednesday, the 17th of January, 1776, was bitter cold. The ground was covered with snow and a boisterous wind shrieked through the streets of London. Yet thousands of people shivered in the blast for hours that they might see the melancholy procession which presently set out for Tyburn. First there was a hurdle, on which two miserable coiners shivered as the rude contrivance bumped over the stones. Next followed a cart, in which George Lee, the boy highwayman, wearing a crimson coat and a cocked hat, endeavored to convince the populace, by his swaggering airs, that he rather enjoyed an untimely end. He was accompanied by two housebreakers, who wailed and wept all through the journey. Following the cart there was a stately mourning coach, in which sat the Perreau brothers.

The storm had grown worse when Tyburn was reached, so operations were hurried. Daniel and Robert embraced each other and spoke a few affectionate words, and their calm, heroic demeanor was talked of for many a day. They clasped hands on the scaffold, and their hands remained clasped until they were unconscious.

Their punishment, which was out of all proportion to their crime, gave the first impetus to the sentiment against capital punishment for such offenses as forgery and that sentiment led a few years later (though not until the scaffold had claimed Dodd, Fauntleroy and other victims) to the repeal of brutal laws and the substitution of more humane ones.

I had several doctors and was in the hospital for some time. I tried CARDUI and by the time I had taken the second bottle, I could stay up all day, and sleep sound at night. Anti-Catholic Speaker Stirs Up Such Excitement that Mayor Declares Martial Law

NEW LEXINGTON, Ohio, Sept. 13.—Martial law, declared here last night by Mayor R. B. Gue, following a riotous demonstration against Jeremiah Crowley, anti-Catholic speaker, was lifted today after Crowley had been hustled out of the city by friends. Crowley, who claims to be an ex-priest, came here Wednesday and delivered two lectures, one Wednesday night and one on Thursday night. He was hooted and pelted with eggs and other missiles following his speech Thursday.

When he attempted to complete his series of three lectures last night a large crowd gathered in front of the hall in which he was to appear and threatened violence. They refused to be dispersed by the local authorities and Mayor Gue then called out the local company of militia. The troops refused to allow Crowley to speak and finally dispersed the crowd.

the regulation of public dance halls was referred to a committee. The resolution suggested the placing of a $15 license on every public dance hall in the city, after the hall had been approved by the chief of police, the Associated Charities, the health and building, and the Wisconsin vice prevention society. The ordinance read that no one of either sex under the age of eighteen years unaccompanied by their parents should be allowed at a public dance hall.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—With the passage of the tariff bill by the senate, publication of the government crop report, containing estimates that had been for the most part discounted by the grain markets; breaking of the drought in the southwest, introduction of the currency bill in the house and the excitement attending the stories of a proposed "Melon cutting" by the Union Pacific directors, there was plenty in the week's news to stimulate trading on the stock exchange. Nearly all of the developments were favorable in the sense that they did not give rise to fresh complications.

In the same way satisfaction was felt at the formal introduction of the currency bill in the house and signs that the president was bent upon pushing the measure, so that the agitation should not be unduly prolonged.

EVIDENCE PROVES INSIDIOUS LOBBY

Wilson's Charge Is Backed Up in Opinion of the Senate and House Probers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—President Wilson's charge that an "insidious lobby" has been operating at the national capital will be sustained by the reports of the senate and house investigating committees. A canvass of the members indicated today that the democrats, at least, are a unit in the belief that evidence developed so far backs up the president.

The house committee planned today to close the hearings and begin preparation of its report next week.

BIG INCREASE IN CITY'S VALUATION

La Crosse Worth $734,771 More Than It Was in 1912, Says Tax Commissioner Frisch

La Crosse is worth exactly $734,771.00 more this year than it was last year, according to official figures completed today by Joseph Frisch, tax commissioner.

In 1912, he says, the total land value, exclusive of buildings, was $5,789,718.00. The value of the improvements was $9,383,438.00. The total valuation was $15,173,156.00.

In 1913 the land value was $5,812,178.00. The improvements totalled $9,719,428.00. The total value was $15,531,606.00.

This shows a gain of $734,771.00 for the city of La Crosse during the twelve months' period.

The personal property tax here shows a gain over 1913. In 1912 the total value of local personal property was $5,302,751.00. This year it is $5,679,072.

There is a decrease of 400 head in the cattle here and a correspondingly big decrease in the number of wagons, carriages and sleighs.

The various figures on manufacturers and merchants stocks vary from those of last year but according to Mr. Frisch they, as a whole, show that La Crosse is going forward and prospering.

HE URGES PUBLICITY

DOCTOR DECLARES ACCURATE NEWSPAPER STORIES ARE NOT DETRIMENT BUT AID TO PROFESSION

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 13.—A plea for widespread publicity for medical discoveries and remedies instead of the secrecy formerly pursued by the medical profession by J. Scott McNutt, of Orange, N. J., today aroused the delegates to the convention of the American Public Health association in session here.

The speaker argued that publicity, far from being a detriment to medicine and to medical discoveries, was the best possible thing for both, as it made "the remedy as impressive as the evil." As a striking illustration of the power of publicity he referred to the recent newspaper discussion of the Friedmann tuberculosis treatment.

"By all means let us have publicity, but tempered with accuracy and proportion," said Mr. McNutt, "and let us strive to make the remedy as impressive as the evil."

VETERANS PICNIC AT LA CRESCENT

On Saturday last, Wilson Colwell Auxiliary, No. 2, W. R. C., and their husbands, spent a very enjoyable day at La Crescent, having been invited to a picnic at the home of Comrade Selby, who met them at the train and marched them to their destination under the flying colors of "Old Glory."

Although the heat was intense, the guests numbered thirty. Arriving at the "Selby" home, a sumptuous spread was found awaiting them.

Many of the faces formerly known to all were missing, they having answered the "Last Call," but by those who are left these picnics are eagerly looked forward to, and the hospitality of Comrade Selby was very much enjoyed.

Post Wheeler Called to Washington from Rome to Make Explanations

ALLEGE ABUSE OF PRIVILEGE

American Complains He Has Been Using Import Courtesy for Personal Profit

ROME, Sept. 13.—Post Wheeler, of New York, first secretary of the United States embassy here, was today summoned to Washington by the state department to explain charges filed against him there. Wheeler and Ambassador O'Brien refused to make statements.

American Complains

For several weeks a rumor has been current in Rome that an American, whose name is withheld, made a complaint to the state department at Washington accusing Wheeler of abusing his diplomatic privileges in the matter of receiving imports duty free. The Italian government allows diplomats and diplomatic attaches to receive goods from other countries without paying any duty and the vague reports here are to the effect that Wheeler is accused of taking advantage of this courtesy to make a profit for himself, turning it to commercial advantage.

When Wheeler was summoned to Washington he refused to talk, as did the ambassador. He is said to have told an intimate friend that he was going to Washington merely to explain insinuations made against him and that he has not been formally charged with anything.

Post Wheeler, formerly of New York, is the husband of Hallie Erminie Rives, the writer, and has been in the diplomatic service for five years.

Bryan Silent

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—State department officials admitted today that charges against Post Wheeler, secretary of the American embassy at Rome, had been lodged by an American whose name was withheld. Secretary of State Bryan flatly refused to discuss the matter.

"What do young gentlemen like you want to waste your time on Eva Tanguay for?" asked Mr. Hoeschler briskly. "She can't sing nor dance. She's an acrobatic hoyden without an elevating characteristic."

The boys looked at each other a bit shame-faced for a moment. Then it came out.

"She's got a peach of a shape," said one youngster, with scared bravado.

"That's press agent dope," said Mr. Hoeschler. "She can't compete with half her chorus girls when it comes to the 'human form divine.' Look 'em over, and see. There are three or four of them sleeping off jags right now in the alley back of Barron's."

Conversation lagged, but presently one of the boys drifted with an aimless air over to the west door and covertly squinted at said alley. Then he pricked up his ears and rubbered hard.

Sure enough, there were female persons reclining upon the soft side of the brick-paved alley.

The boy whispered to his pals. Then they hurried out and made straight for the alley, the foremost peeking cautiously into it from the shelter of the store. The others pushed him, and in an instant the giggling gang were in the alley, in plain view of the sleepers, should they awake.

Then profanity ran riot, the young dare-devils indulging in such violent language as "fudge" and "fiddlesticks."

The "chorus girls" proved to be some old models for draping gowns, which, discarded from the store, were awaiting the dray that was to take them to the rubbish dump.

PRINCE TOO TIRED FOR AN INTERVIEW

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Prince Albert I of Monaco, king of Monte Carlo, spent an hour in Chicago today, enroute to Cody, Wyo., where he is to join Col. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) on a hunting trip.

It was only 8 o'clock in the morning when the prince found reporters clamoring for an interview, and he faced them, yawning and confessing that in his little kingdom it wasn't customary to arise at such an unearthly hour.

"I'm tired," said the prince, "dreadfully tired—so tired that I have nothing to say, and if I had, I'd be too tired to say it."

With the prince is Dr. F. Louet, royal physician of Monaco, an aide-de-camp and Tinayze, a Parisian artist, who accompanies the party to make sketches of anything that interests his highness.

FUGITIVE CHARGE CASE GOES OVER

Thaw Court Trial Set Over Pending Decision on Extradition

COLEBROOK, N. H., Sept. 13.—By consent the fugitive from justice charge against Harry K. Thaw was continued by Justice of the Peace Cart until next Thursday. Both attorneys for New York state and for Thaw agreed. It is the understanding that in the interim the extradition of Thaw will come up before Governor Felker at Concord. Sheriff Hornbeck of Dutchess county, N. Y., with the extradition papers is now at Concord.

Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States district court, this afternoon issued a writ of habeas corpus to the attorneys for Harry K. Thaw. The writ is returnable at Middleton, N. H., Tuesday, September 16, at 11 o'clock. It is said that it will insure Thaw of a long stay in this state. Issued with the writ was an injunction against the kidnaping of Thaw by either the New York state attorneys or Thaw's supporters. GovernorFelker has not yet received the papers signed by Governor Glynn asking for the extradition of Thaw.

T. R. TO DEFEND JUDGE LINDSEY

Colonel Offers Aid if Attempt Is Made to Recall; Lindsey Attacks Enemies

DENVER, Col., Sept. 13.—If a petition to recall Juvenile Judge Lindsey is filed by his enemies, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt will hurry here and take the platform in defense of the judge. The jurist has received word from the former president saying that if his aid should be needed by Judge Lindsey in his campaign against a recall, Roosevelt would take the next train for Denver and help him fight.

Friends of the judge, however, declared today danger of a recall petition was past, following a stormy meeting of the Denver Taxpayer's association last night, at which Lindsey defended himself and his record. For three hours the meeting listened to the bitterest invective in the denunciation and defense of the judge. Such names as "liar," "cur," "drunkard" and "crook" were freely bandied and several times fist fights were barely averted. For an hour Judge Lindsey denounced his enemies in the most bitter terms. A resolution was passed to appoint a committee to investigate Judge Lindsey's conduct of the juvenile court.

SOCIETY OF EQUITY TO CONVENE HERE

Wisconsin Farmers' Organization Convention with 600 Delegates Here This Fall

The annual convention of the Wisconsin branch of the American Society of Equity will be held in this city either the last week of November or the first week in December. The society is 12,000 strong in this state and has 1,000,000 members throughout the country. It is composed principally of farmers.

Andrew Boyd, president of the Langdon-Boyd Packing company, suggested some time ago to John Utermoehl, secretary of the board of trade, that an invitation be extended the organization to meet in this city. Mr. Boyd has received a communication from the state headquarters of the association saying that there would probably be six hundred members present.

M. Wes. Tubbs is head of the association in this state with offices in Madison.

DIAZ WILL LEAD ANOTHER REVOLT

Backed by Uncle Porfirio, Felix Diaz Will Fight Provisional President Huerta

REVOLUTION NOW IS UNDER WAY

Rich Bull Fighter at Head of 900 Men in Vera Cruz and Tamaulipas

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 13.—Felix Diaz, backed by his uncle, Porfirio Diaz, deposed by Madero, will lead a new revolt against the Huerta government within the next two months, according to Carlos Villareal, former attorney general of Mexico, who passed through New Orleans enroute to Europe via New York. The Cientifico party with millions of dollars and including ex-Minister of Finance of Mexico Jose Yues Limantour, Huerta's former Minister of War, Manuel Mondragon and former Minister of Justice Rodolfo Reyes, son of Bernardo Reyes, are named as co-leaders in the revolt.

All the plotters are to meet the aged Porfirio Diaz in Biarritz as soon as they can reach Europe and he will direct the operations in the field which have already been opened by Vicente Segura, millionaire bull fighter who is now leading 900 men in behalf of Felix Diaz in the states of Vera Cruz and Tamaulipas.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 13.—Via Galveston.—Adherents of General Felix Diaz, a presidential candidate, were wrought up today over General Huerta's "removal" of Pedro Rosales, governor of Hidalgo. They assert that Huerta means to place his own military governors in every state and arbitrarily to control the coming elections.

a La Crosse National bank check book and a record of the twenty-five dollar deposit. Seven of the La Crosse checks were missing. Six were passed here and it is presumed by Chief Webber that the seventh was destroyed as the result of an error in making the forgeries.

Following is a list of the places and banks through which they have worked:

August 16—First National bank of Sioux City, Iowa, $50 deposited under name of Miss Margaret Kelly. Eighteen checks gone from check book.

August 18—First National bank of Omaha, $25 deposited under name of Miss Clara McCormick. Twenty-two checks gone from check book.

August 22—Merchants' National bank of Indianapolis, Ind., $25 deposited under name of Miss Florence E. Brasher. Eleven checks gone from check book.

August 23—City National bank of Dayton, Ohio, $25 deposited under name of Miss May Griffith. Nineteen check gone from check book.

August 25—Central Trust and Savings Deposit bank of Cincinnati, O., $25 deposited under name of Miss Virginia Duffa. Eleven checks gone from check book.

August 27—National Bank of La Crosse, Wis., $25 deposited under name of Miss Gertrude Hosmer. Seven checks gone from check book.

August 29—First National bank of Dubuque, Iowa, $25 deposited under name of Miss B. Winall. Eleven checks gone from check book.

Sept. 11—Central State bank of Des Moines, $25 deposited under name of Miss Florence M. Brown. Eight checks gone from check book.

Total number of checks missing from check books, 107.

With their arrest on crowded Walnut street in Des Moines between Fifth street and Sixth avenue at 6 o'clock last night, city detectives there believe they have captured two of the most sensational check artists known in local police annals, who they are wanted in eight large cities in the middle west.

They admit two forgeries in Des Moines and say they have worked elsewhere.

Mrs. Powers, who is about 24 years old, very attractive and fashionably gowned, is the daughter of a rich ice manufacturer in Superior, Wis., so the husband told the Des Moines police. Powers is a college graduate, but refuses to give the detectives the least inkling of his home or his family. He told the police they ran away from Superior a year ago and were married in a Catholic church at Chicago. The girl ran away with him, he is said to have told detectives, because her parents refused consent to their marriage. Further information of their eventful romance, the husband and his young wife refuse to give.

A telegram to a Des Moines paper from Superior says:

"Mrs. William Powers is the daughter of A. C. Boland, president of the Lake Nebagonen Ice company She married Powers a short time ago."

The clever game of the pair was exposed accidentally. The woman was passing checks for $36.50—the same amount for which the local checks were drawn—when two department store heads, who had cashed similar checks, spied her. The arrest followed.

Mrs. Powers is uncommonly beautiful and left her home in Superior because her father, a wealthy man, objected to her marriage to Powers.

Chief Webber today wired the Des Moines police that he had warrants for the pair in the event the case there failed to convict them.

TROOPERS RIDE DOWN STRIKERS

With Drawn Sabers They Charge Mob at Calumet and Trample Many Women

CALUMET, Mich., Sept. 13.—State troopers with drawn sabres today rode down a mob of copper strikers in Eighth street. Many persons, a goodly portion of them women, were knocked down and trampled upon by the horses and several were injured, none seriously. The rioting started early in the morning when strikers and women sympathizers from all over the copper country gathered in Calumet for a big demonstration.

IDENTIFY BODY OF MURDER VICTIM

Brother Says New York's Mysterious Torso Is that of Sister Miss Antoinette Day

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Confident that the murder victim, parts of whose dismembered body lie in a Hoboken morgue, wass Miss Antoinette Day, a 22 year old Brooklyn girl, the police are today searching for a young physician of Brooklyn, who will be questioned what he may know of the case.

Francis D. Day, a real estate broker, today declared that his first identification of the body as that of his sister is positive. He was closeted with the inspectors and gave a detailed account of the acquaintance of his sister with a young physician who graduated two years ago from the Long Island college of physicians and surgeons. Day said that in August his family became aware that Antoinette was facing motherhood. A fortnight later, or two or three days before the discovery of the fragments of the body, Antoinette disappeared.

Day viewed the body and identified it by the birthmark on the shoulder.

VAUDEVILLE AGAIN BEGINNING SUNDAY

Majestic Opens with Slight Change in Policy; Comedy Show for the Opener

After a "lay-off" of four months, the vaudeville season in La Crosse will reopen again tomorrow afternoon with a matinee at the Majestic theater.

Manager F. L. Koppelberger today announced some slight changes in the policy of the house, chief among them being the inauguration of a regular three-shows-daily system. There will be a matinee every day at 2:30, and evening performances at 7:30 and 9 o'clock. The bills will conform to a high standard, Mr. Koppelberger said, with four or five acts of vaudeville, interspersed with motion pictures. The Kinemacolor pictures, which have proven such a success here all this summer while the Majestic has been run as a "movie" theater, will be continued.

The bills will be changed Sunday and Thursday each week. Each program will be a full hour and a half show. A slight cut in prices has been made, seats now selling at 10, 20 and 30 cents.

A first class show, all comedy, will open the season, according to the announcement of Mr. Koppelberger. The bill includes Willard and Bond, fresh off the Orpheum circuit, who star in a travesty blackface act, based on the Bertillon system of identifying criminals. The act is styled "Detectivism."

Dixon Bowers and Dixon, including Miss Anna Burt, have a comedy musical act, full of appeal for music lovers and with much funny patter, which they bill as "The Ar-kansaw Fiddler."

There will also be an eccentric singing, dancing and talking act, put on by the Misses Grace and Phyllis Foster, two young ladies of personal charm and ability as comediennes.

Stone and Hayes, in a comedy talking and singing act, will complete the bill.

The house this year will keep to the high standard set in former years in every way. The orchestra will again be in charge of Prof. John Andre, and will be composed of accomplished musicians.

She is indeed a selfish summer girl who wants a whole hammock to herself.

And she who loves and runs away may have a fit of regret later.

Pull Together

Dissension in a town makes the grass grow in the streets.

Unity makes the trade grow in the stores.

Other things being equal, a city is usually as big as the faith of its people.

If they believe in it enough to sink all differences and pull together you can bet dollars to doughnuts that town is on the up grade.

When all the merchants unite for the good of their burg it is a safe gamble that home trade will unite itself to them.

It is better to have the long green in the tills than the grass green in the streets.

Unity makes the long green grow.

The town that does not pull together will be pulled to pieces.

ONLY NERVOUS

The sufferer from Neurasthenia (lack of nerve force) frequently places himself in the "only nervous" class. Let us see why he is nervous. That "born tired" feeling becomes chronic. Every little exertion of mind or body is followed by fatigue out of all proportion. He has a great deal of headache and frequently has backache. All manner of vague sensations, such as heat, cold, prickling, numbness, stiffness, soreness, pain and pressure felt in limbs or any part of the body. Eyes seem affected, sounds and smells may become exaggerated and any slight surprise produces a real nervous shock. He has nervous indigestion, with variable appetite and constipation, or diarrhœa is common. There is palpitation of the heart or pains around the heart annoy and distress the poor sufferer, who becomes from these accumulated troubles full of anxiety and fear. These sensations become symptoms of disease and in time the symptoms become chronic and if permitted to run their course, lead the victim into maladies which break down the nerve force so that he or she is unfit for work or pleasure. For the man or woman so afflicted to think there is nothing the matter is a serious injustice and a great injury.

Only Nervous? Diagnosis is difficult and that is why so many fail to cure neurasthenics. Nervousness is the costume and mask—the outward appearance so imperfectly seen and comprehended by the inexpert as regards its true significance, that what is beneath—the underlying cause for the trouble—is overlooked. If you are "only nervous" you must awaken to the dangers of neglecting the nervousness and you must not permit yourself to drift into conditions which will bring on maladies that will prove a menace to your future.

What is needed is sympathetic, skillful, prompt and continuous treatment. You can and must obtain relief. Consult the eminent Dr. Turbin, who visits our city once a month.

CALLS HEALTH WORK BANE OF HUMANITY

A. J. Kellogg of Battle Creek Says It Violates Law of Survival of the Fittest

LOWERS STAMINA OF THE RACE

Declares Weakling Strains Are Being Established Which Will Bring Disaster

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 13.—"Public health work has not only to prevent race degeneracy; it has actually accelerated the rate of decay. Acute maladies and adverse conditions of life are a natural means of weeding out weaklings and securing the survival of the fittest. Public health work, protection of water supplies and improving the general environment of human life has in large measure set aside this great biologic law."

Caused Much Talk

This discussion of theory of survival of the fittest in matters of health by Dr. J. A. Kellogg of Battle Creek, Mich., has caused considerable debate today among the delegates to the convention of the American Public Health association now in session here. Dr. Kellogg's address was delivered late yesterday. He continued:

"It is no longer the fittest alone that survive, but also the individual who is offered most protection. The preservation of these weak and unfit individuals increases the average death age, but at the same time decreases the average stamina of the race. Through heredity, weak strains are established which must corrupt and depreciate the stronger ones more and more from one generation to another."

Sickness on Increase

"Sickness at all ages of life is increasing. Public sanitation is not lessening the mortality from chronic disease, which is, on the contrary, increasing at a surprisingly rapid rate," declared Dr. Kellogg.

"We are face to face with a race disease which must inevitably end in race suicide. Insanity is increasing at an alarming rate, which, if not checked, means that 100 years hence nine per cent of the population will be insane, idiotic or imbecile."

The association elected Dr. W. C. Woodward of Washington, D. C., health officer of the District of Columbia, president. The next meeting will be held at Jacksonville, Fla.

Could Not Move Him.

Having tried unsuccessfully various highly recommended plans for dislodging selfish passengers from the coveted seats, the woman who swung from a strap in front of the sandy man tried talking "at" him to her husband. As a peroration to her harangue she said: "If you, James, should ever be piggish enough to sit down where there was a woman in the car left standing I would never speak to you again as long I live." The sandy man looked up then. "Lucky lad," he said. "Not many of us could purchase peace at that price."

Determining Current of Electricity.

There is a very simple manner, which is not generally known, of determining the character of the electricity which one may happen to want to make use of. It is well known that implements which are made for the direct current are not available where the alternating current is used, and in order to ascertain which kind of current is passing through the wires it is only necessary to hold a small horseshoe magnet up to one of the lamps. If it is alternating current the filament will vibrate, but if it is direct current the filament will lean toward the magnet.

POEMS You Ought To Know

THE CRY OF THE CHILDREN
(By Elizabeth Barrett Browning.)

Do ye hear the children weeping, O, my brothers,
Ere the sorrow comes with years?
They are leaning their young heads against their mothers,
And they cannot stop their tears.

But the young, young children, O, my brothers,
They are weeping bitterly!
They are weeping in the playtime of the others,
In the country of the free.

Still, all day, the iron wheels go onward,
Grinding life down from its mark;
And the children's souls which God is calling sunward,
Spin on blindly in the dark.

Temple to mark Greatest Of Sermons
J. Ackerman Coles, the famous American physician, art critic and pubuicist, has suggested to Protestant Episcopal church authorities the erection of a Chapel on Mars Hill, Athens, to mark the spot of one of the greatest of sermons. So far as known there is no congregation to attend and support such Chapel. If built it would be out of pure sentiment, but efforts would be made to raise up a congregation to use it. Dr. Coles has just given the campanile to be erected in the market place fronting the harbor of Rangoon, Burma. The following, drawn up as wording for the bronze tablet, explains its dirivation and purpose:

"Reproduction of the tower of Tabernacle Church, Salem, Mass., U. S. A., through which Adoniarm Judson, Gordon Hall, Samuel Newell, Samuel Not and Luther Rice passed to and from their ordination, February 6, 1812, as the first American missionaries to Asia. In recognition of the evangelical work accomplished by them, and their successors, during the past one hundred years, and that yet to be effected by all other ambassadors of Christ during the coming centuries, this Tower of Peace was built and given by J. Ackerman Coles, M. D. LL. D."

Dr. Coles has given memorial houses to institutions in India, and gave to Oxford and Cambridge universities in England busts of Washington and Franklin. He is a son of Dr. Abraham Coles, the famous translator, publicist, poet, and friend of famous men on both continents of the last generation. Himself a Baptist, the young men going out from Salem were Congregationalists, and he now makes the Mars Hill, Athens, suggestion of a St. Paul Chapel to Episcopalians. The Bangoon campanile is to be a permanent part of the centennial celebration of the start of Baptist missions in Burma, to take place in December next.

Night Classes For Ministerial Instruction
Something new this fall are preparatory schools for theological seminaries. These are announced in several cities, and are projected in all cases, so far as heard from, by individual ministers. These ministers say they find an increasing number of young men, some still in high school, who want to do church work, a fair proportion f them willing to consider studying for the ministry. There is shortage in nearly all Protestant bodies, the Methodist and Disciples of Christ possibly excepted, and these ministers profess to believe that here may prove to be a way to recruit many new men. They also declare that cities are not keeping pace with rural sections in supply of men furnished to the ministry. To bring up the cities to do their part, or at least more than they now do, is a further aim of these new schools.

The Rev. John R. Gunn, a young Southern Baptist minister, going to a New York City pastorate, announced such schools with night classes. He gives out his conviction that city reared men are better qualified to work in city pastorates, because from boyhood they have known city conditions as country trained men have not. The Rev. Walter E. Bentley, a Brooklyn Episcopal rector, also announces a preparatory school. He is a one time actor, playing Shakespeare leading support parts to well known stars. He finds young men trying the stage and turning to the ministry as more to their liking. A half dozen young comedians have been successfully made over into ministers, and more are applying to be so remade. Chicago and Detroit pastors are known, in two instances at least, to be giving study to this subject of setting up preparatory training schools for would-be theologs.

A Mystery to Him
The late John Allen of Farmington, Maine, was noted for his ready wit and cutting sarcasm. One day while walking down the street he slipped on some ice and fell. The Methodist minister of the town happened to be near and helped the old man to his feet with the remark:

"Sinners stand on slippery ground, don't they, John?"

'Yes," retorted Mr. Allen, "but I don't see how they do it."—Harper's Magazine.

Kept Near Safety
During a certain battle the colonel of an Irish regiment noticed that one of his men was extremely devoted to him and followed him everywhere. At length he remarked:

"Well, my man, you have stuck by me well today."

"Yis, sorr," replied Pat. "Shure, me mither said to me, said she, 'Just stick to the colonel, Patrick, me bhoy, and you'll be all roight. Them colonels never gets hurted."

Gaby's Slimness
Mlle. Gaby Deslys, the French dancer, is an exceedingly slender young person, and for purposes of better demonstrating her art she wears, when on the stage, exceedingly slender clothes. A person from the interior who had seen the lady came forth to tell about her.

"What does she look like?" asked a friend.

"Well," said the visitor, "if she'd shut one eye she'd look like a needle."—Saturday Evening Post.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Carlo Will Now Keep Away From Chickens.

Carlo Ran Yelping Home.

"THERE," said daddy as he put down his book; "I was wondering if you were going to let me off from the story."

Jack and Evelyn smiled. "Ah, we couldn't do that!" they said.

So daddy leaned back in his chair to think.

"I told you how puppy dog Carlo started to run away. Well, after being scolded by his mother, Mrs. Beauty, he was good for some time.

"'Now, Carlo,' she said one morning, 'I am going to run up to the house a minute, and I want you to be a very good little puppy and stay here in the doghouse until I come back.'

"Carlo promised, and he meant to keep his promise, but after awhile he got lonesome. In the chicken yard Mr. Strut, the rooster, gave a loud crow.

"Mrs. Beauty then told him that he must never go into the chicken yard. 'Dogs are not allowed in there,' she said.

"'Why not?' Carlo had asked.

"'Chickens are afraid of dogs,' Mrs. Beauty replied. 'Our mistress would not like us to frighten them. It is not kind to frighten any one.'

"When Mr. Strut crowed so loudly Carlo thought again of the chicken yard. 'I don't see why the chickens should be afraid of a little puppy dog like me,' Carlo said to himself as he trotted toward the wire fence.

"The gate was open a little. Gates always did seem to be temptingly open for Carlo just when they should not.

"What interested Carlo was Mrs. Biddy with her ten little chicks. The chicks were as round as balls and as fat as butter. Carlo thought what good playthings they would make. Then he popped into the chicken yard.

"Mrs. Biddy saw him coming. Down went her head, and snip, snap! she pecked Carlo on both sides of his round little head.

"'I'll teach you to frighten my babies!' cackled Mrs. Biddy, and all the hens cackled, 'Served him right!' while big Mr. Strut chased Carlo out of the chicken yard.

"Carlo ran, yelping, home and crouched down in the darkest corner of the doghouse.

"When Mrs. Beauty came home and saw the blood trickling down his face from the places where Mrs. Biddy had pecked him she was very much put out. She carefully licked the sore head to make it well, but she said very severely:

"'You will get into trouble one of these days if you don't mind what you are told.' And, with the tears running down his face, Carlo promised that never any more would he go into the chicken yard.

"'Chickens are mean old things anyway,' he murmured as he fell off to sleep."

FIND "DEAD" MAN
PONTNAC, Ill., Sept. 13.—Shamefaced and with tears rolling down his cheeks, Oliver LaFlamme for ten years mourned as dead, threw himself into the arms of his mother at Momence today and confessed that while his relatives sought in vain for him he was working on a farm in southern Illinois. LaFlamme disappeared in 1903. A year ago his relatives began proceedings at Kankakee to compel the Modern Woodmen of America to pay $2,000 life insurance he carried, in the belief that he was dead. Agents for the fraternal order started an investigation and found him.

THE KALEIDOSCOPE OF MODERN FASHIONS

One who watches the procession of the fashions and observes the first, hesitating, semi-bashful entrance of a new mode, then its growth in popularity, and finally the swagger and flamboyancy it assumes in its last exaggerated form, must derive much entertainment from the kaleidoscopic changes. It is not hard to recall certain of these evolutions?—the leg-o'-mutton sleeve of blessed memory, for instance, which expanded to such proportions that it must have sailed away, balloon fashion, for it has been long lost to sight. One after another the caprices have taken us. Just now the critic is engaged with the vagaries of the split skirt, a pretty enough fashion when kept within proper bounds and not used by vulgar wearers to exploit themselves.

But this, too, will pass, for, though the hue and cry that is always raised against a new mode would lead us to infer that the whole world is going to the "eternal bow-wows" in dress, the great mass of women remain conservative and manage to clothe themselves in very graceful, becoming fashion. One of these dainty, conservative gowns is illustrated in the first figure. It is such a dress as every sensible woman must approve. The development is in tan and brown striped serge. The collar and cuffs are of heavy ecru-colored lace. The frill, adorning the front closing, is of fine hem-stitched batiste, matching the shade of the collar and cuffs. A girdle of brown satin ribbon, and buttons covered with brown satin, finish an outfit attractive enough for any morning or afternoon affair either in city or country. The costume has the advantage of being both stylish and serviceable, considerations of vast import to the majority of women.

That the present day costume be smart it is not necesary that it be one-piece or monotone in color. It is now decreed that simple and elaborate costumes alike may strike a different note in skirt and waist. In fact, many of the most modish waists are waists in name only. The fabrics chosen are so sheer and lacy as to be mere wisps. This penchant for waists of tulle, net, chiffon and lace will be very notable during fall and winter months. In tulle and chiffon the most fashionable shade is known as "chair" color, which is simply another way of saying flesh tint. For wear with the afternoon tailored suits for maninee, bridge or tea they will be much in evidence. Invariably, because of the flimsy quality of the fabric, to insure a perfect fit they are arranged over an underbodice of white or pale pink silk, to which all seams, tucks and trimming are attached. There are dropped armholes bound with pale pink silk. The only fulness of the long sleeve is seen at the armholes and cuffs, the latter being daintily finished with gathered ruffles. The blouse is crossed in front, surplice fashion, and held in place, not by frogs, braid or buttons, but by tiny bows of silk or velvet which begin at the base of the V-neck and terminate at the high girdle. An esthetic means of trimming these diaphanous blouses—a fashion,moreover, which may be also effectively applied to the hat—is by means of butterflies. These are made of tulle, lace or spangled net, wired to hold out the wings, and with black satin or velvet bodies fashioned by twisting the fabric about a firm piece of wire. Nesting close to milady's bodice or perched ready to fly from the side-crown of her hat, they are a most attractive means of ornamentation.

Tulle and net girdles, sashes, neck and sleeve frills, also tunics and flounces, either plain or much bespangled, are among the latest and most artistic fancies. Blouses and all dainty accessories should be made by hand. It is the bit of hand work which imparts a distinctive note and which comes, oh! so high, in the shops. Those who long for the dainty and pleasing, without gross incursion on the pocketbook, may have it in exchange for only a little time, patience and skill.

But there are always many persons in each community who, from necessity or preference, consider sheer fabrics too perishable for their use. For these a model such as this will meet with hearty approval. It was developed in blue taffeta, with small, double, circular motif of cerise shade. Yoke, collar, cuffs and girdle are of soft figured silk in tones similar to those combined in the taffeta. The yoke of the waist is a charming feature, extending, as it does, into the sleeve and to the underarm both back and front. The skirt is two-piece, with the fulness at the waist line laid in soft pleats.

Figure Two

The lovely soft taffetas, which arrived with the first breath of spring, have been somewhat side tracked by the sheer muslins, voiles, marquisettes and batistes of midsummer. With the first tings of autumn they are again returning to favor and promise to be among the smartest of fall fabrics for home wear, teas, luncheons and like informal affairs. For the flounces now so popular and for the pleated peplums the new soft taffeta is particularly fit. Plaid taffetas this season will have an unprecedented vogue. In fact, to be quite modish, this lovely new tartan should be introduced either in sleeves, vest or girdle; in waist and pepuum, in separate waist, or in the skirt. Much latitude for its introduction is afforded. Just so long as it makes an appearance its whereabouts is not important. In shades of blue, green and gold, or combined with any of the varying copper tints now so fashionable, after strenuous effort to arrive, taffetas for morning and afternoon wear have come to tarry awhile.

Chicago Grain Review

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Wheat advanced ½c for September and ⅛c to ⅜c for December today on higher Liverpool cables and moderate covering by shorts, shortly after the opening and held the gain until the close, despite the weakness in corn. Cash grain dealers were heavy buyers in the pit toward noon and supported the market.

Corn started higher on Liverpool cables but heavy week-end liquidation set in and prices slumped abruptly, dropping 2⅛c for September and a cent for December in the short session today.

Oats started firm, but with the decline in corn had a slump that carried prices a trifle under those at yesterday's close.

Provisions were weak at the start and closed lower than the day's weak opening.

WOODARD TANGLE SPLITS CONFIDENCE

Attempt Made to Remove Stigma from Waupun Warden Loses at Beloit

BELOIT, Wis., Sept. 13.—The case of Rev. Daniel Woodard, warden of the Wisconsin state penitentiary at Waupun, who was expelled from the Wisconsin Methodist Episcopal conference a year ago, because he took the stump in the interests of Governor McGovern in the last primary campaign, today for the second time threatened to split the conference in session here.

A year ago Woodard was expelled from the conference because of his active participation in politics. Today Woodard's ministerial credentials were presented together with a plea that they be marked "Honorably Discharged." The matter was referred to a committee and an affirmative report returned. A ballot taken at once was favorable and it was about to be ordered that the credentials be marked as requested, when the "anti-Woodardites" led by Rev. T. W. North, secretary of the conference entered the fight.

After a wrangle of more than an hour, the conference granted a reconsideration of the vote and the proposition to mark credentials "Honorably Discharged" was voted down by a small majority.

Watching The Scoreboard

BY HAL SHERIDAN.

The sun may shine in Pittsburg today, but if it doesn't the Giants are willing to look for pop flies with lanterns just to give Rube Marquard a chance to shoot his benders at the Pirates through the Pittsburg gloom.

The Athletics showed the old kick in the seventh inning against the White Sox. Coming up four times behind the Mackmen turned loose a broadside that brought in six runs and won.

Oldring tripled with the bases full as his part of the attack and Franklin Baker wound it up by shooting over the fence.

Both the Giants and Athletics now lead the runners-up in the leagues by 7½ games. To even sew up the race the Phillies must win 22 out of their 27 remaining games if the Giants win only half the games remaining.

Cleveland now leads Washington by only one game. Walter Johnson repeated against the Naps yesterday and held them to four hits. This gave Washington a clean sweep of the series.

By making it three out of four from the St. Louis Browns, the Yanks pulled themselves up to a point where they can see daylight filtering through the cellar door.

The Yanks are just one game behind the Browns and expect to pass them next week.

The Red Sox reversed the order of things from Thursday and had a little slugging bee of their own at the expense of Detroit. They hammered Comstock, Grover and Lorenz for 21 hits and 18 runs.

PRINCETON SQUAD OUT

PITCHES 21 BALLS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Statistical fans doped out today that in his nine innings of pitching against the Naps yesterday, Walter Johnson twirled only 21 called balls. In all he pitched 97 times and of this number 48 were strikes and 28 were fouled. In the first he struck out Jackson on three pitched balls, repeating the feat on Lajoie in the ninth. In the fifth he pitched 13 straight strikes.
